

Knowledge translation pathway for policy

We have recently been doing a fair bit of consultation on how to translate knowledge from disability research into the hands of policy makers. Our ultimate goal is to seek change in the policy infrastructure to enhance accessibility and opportunities for people with disabilities. We have evolved an 8-step process, starting with identifying policy-relevant findings from your research, and ending with expressing what you have to offer to policy-makers. At each step, depending on the content area of your research, Alliance partners may be able to assist you to optimize the impact of your research. Take a look at the attached pathway, share it with your research teams and partners, and call us if you think we can help.

Click here for more information.

